FACTS

Beginning in late January, The Modesto Bee and others sought disclosure of certain search warrants addressed to the person and property of Scott Peterson in connection with an ongoing investigation of the disappearance of his wife, Laci Peterson. The Bee filed a petition for access to those documents, relying on Penal Code section 1534 and California Rules of Court, rules 243.1 and 243.2. The District Attorney opposed the petition on the basis that Penal Code section 1534 did not apply to pre-arrest warrants and, if it did, the statute violated the constitutional separation of powers doctrine. The matter was heard April 4, 2003 by the Hon. Roger Beauschane.

Judge Beauschane agreed with the news media that Penal Code section 1534 and rules 243.1 and 243.2 apply to pre-arrest search warrants. After an in camera hearing Judge Beauschane nevertheless concluded that the documents should remain sealed in their entirety based on the showing made by the People. He ordered that the documents should be automatically disclosed on the occurrence of either: filing of a complaint or passage of 90 days. The People, not the news media, filed a petition for writ of mandate in the Court of Appeal for the Fifth Appellate District. The People did not challenge the aspect of the court's order requiring disclosure of the documents after the filing of a complaint. Instead, they challenged application of Penal Code section 1534 and the rules of court to pre-arrest warrants.

The court of appeal upheld 99% of Judge Beauschane's order and modified its temporary stay order to make clear it was not prejudging any subsequent application for presumptively and statutorily open judicial records. The court of appeal rejected the People's entire legal argument. It determined only that the superior court erred in determining that disclosure should be automatic upon filing of a complaint or lapse of 90 days. The question whether, with respect to these 8 sealed warrants, disclosure should now be ordered, is pending before Judge Beauschane and is set to be heard on June 3, 2003.

The court of appeal modified its stay order by deleting the second paragraph and inserting the word "prior" in the first sentence so that it is clear that its order applied only to prior orders of the superior court and not to any new proceeding that might be brought. The

1 last sentence of the opinion confirmed that the court's decision was not addressed to 2 subsequent applications for the same or similar documents:

3 Nothing in this order forecloses any interested person or entity from re-applying to the 4 superior court for a release order at an appropriate time in the future and upon a showing 5 of a change in circumstances.

6 Opinion filed May 5, 2003 in F042848, p. 6.

7 The People move to seal the documents in question under very different circumstances
8 from their prior applications. The bodies have been found, an arrest has been made, and a
9 complaint has been filed. Pretrial proceedings are under way. Not only Penal Code section
10 1534, but also the United States Supreme Court Press-Enterprise decisions require public 11 access to court documents and proceedings. The exceptions are narrowly limited and the 12 People have failed to make any showing that would support the extraordinary findings
13 necessary to continue sealing the documents at issue in this motion. See Press-Enterprise Co.
14 v. Superior Court of California, 464 U.S. 501 (1984) (access to voir dire and to related court
15 documents); Press-Enterprise Co. v. Superior Court of California, 478 U.S. 1 (1986) (access 16 to preliminary hearings).

17 ARGUMENT

18 The People must, in order to support the requested sealing, make a showing that 19 supports the findings required by rule 243.2, including, for example, the applicability and 20 weight of exceptions described in the case law, primarily People v. Hobbs, 7 Cal. 4th 948
21 (1994). The People have not attempted to make the type of showing that might be sufficient to 22 support sealing all or a portion of the conditionally sealed documents as set forth in the court
23 of appeal's recent decision.<sup>1</sup> The People do not claim that a potential suspect might be alerted,
24 that evidence would likely be destroyed or that witnesses would conceivably disappear, much 25 less that a confidential informant requires protection. See Opinion filed May 5, 2003 in 26 F042848, p. 5. Since the People have agreed to provide all of the sealed information to the 27

28 <sup>1</sup> The People refer to these exceptions at page 9 and footnote 36 without invoking them.

1 defendant, it would seem that the People agree that the concerns identified by the court of 2 appeal do not apply to these documents.

3 Instead, the People rely on generalizations about pretrial publicity insufficient as a
4 matter of law to permit sealing of statutorily open judicial records. The People argue first that 5 the defense should have an opportunity to make a showing in support of sealing. We agree.
6 The news media anticipate responding to any such showing. Second, the People argue "there is 7 a probability that disclosure will result in prejudicial pre-trial publicity." (People's 8 memorandum of points and authorities at pp. 4-10). The cited authorities are insufficient to 9 support sealing on such a generalized basis. The governing authorities require the court to 10 reject such generalizations and to refuse to continue sealing of the conditionally sealed 11 documents.

12 I. A GENERAL INVOCATION OF PREJUDICE IS INSUFFICIENT TO 13 SUPPORT SEALING PRESUMPTIVELY OPEN JUDICIAL RECORDS;
14 THE MOVING PARTIES MUST SUPPORT THEIR MOTIONS WITH EVIDENCE

15 The rules of court do not permit continued sealing based on generalizations. The court 16 may order the record sealed if (but only if) it expressly finds--based on a noticed motion to 17 seal:

- 18 (1) There exists an overriding interest that overcomes the right of public access to the 19 record;
- 20 (2) The overriding interest supports sealing the record;
- 21 (3) A substantial probability exists that the overriding interest will be prejudiced if the 22 record is not sealed;
- 23 (4) The proposed sealing is narrowly tailored; and
- 24 (5) No less restrictive means exist to achieve the overriding interest.

25 Rules of Court, rule 243.1(d).

26 What is not permissible and will not withstand review is a conclusory finding without 27 reference to evidence, that "disclosure will result in prejudicial pre-trial publicity." If such 28 general invocations of potential prejudice were sufficient, all search warrant documents could

1 be sealed indefinitely and the public's rights under Penal Code section 1534 would be rendered
2 meaningless. See generally, United States v. Brooklier, 685 F.2d 1162, 1169 (9th Cir. 1982)
3 (observing that if such findings were sufficient, all testimony in pretrial proceedings could be 4 taken in secret); see also Globe Newspapers Co. v. Superior Court, 457 U.S. 596, 611 n.27 5 (1982) (holding unconstitutional rule requiring closure of court proceedings without 6 "particularized determinations in individual cases").

7 The nature and kind of evidence that the moving parties must produce to support
8 closure of presumptively open judicial records and proceedings is discussed in Tribune
9 Newspapers West, Inc. v. Superior Court, 172 Cal. App. 3d 443 (1985) (finding abuse of 10 discretion in closing proceedings involving juveniles charged with armed robbery). The 11 opinion also addresses the right of the public to respond to any evidentiary showing.

12 II. EXTENSIVE PUBLICITY IS INSUFFICIENT TO SUPPORT CLOSURE

13 Extensive publicity is not alone sufficient to support closure of a presumptively open
14 hearings or records. Tribune Newspapers West, Inc. v. Superior Court, 172 Cal. App.3d 443
15 (1985), observed:

16 Media dissemination of the alleged facts of horrifying and threatening criminal activity,
17 particularly multiple murders, unfortunately is a fact of life in our society. The news
18 reports may, and do, contain inadmissible hearsay, rank and unfounded opinions,
19 incriminating statements, in accurate sketches and more. But our criminal justice system 20 is deemed to be hearty enough to withstand prejudicial publicity and still guarantee a 21 given defendant the most basic right to receive a fair trial. In this regard, the cost to the 22 criminal justice system to provide a fair trial is the price we pay for an open society, and 23 a free press with access to criminal proceedings.

24 172 Cal. App. 3d at 458-59.

25 Where, as here, there exists a plethora of publicity already in the public domain, it may 26 be difficult to show that closure would be effective to prevent the perceived harm to the 27 defendant. See Press-Enterprise II, 478 U.S. at 14 (defendant must demonstrate that closure 28 would prevent the publicity). The ample existing information about the crimes in this case may simply be repeated, fueled by speculation as to why the court's records must be sealed and what the warrant, addenda and affidavits might show. Indeed, the news media have little to report

1 except speculation, which does not enhance prospects for a fair trial. Since secrecy would not be 2 effective to prevent the perceived harm, the rules require the court to deny the requested sealing.

3 The cases controlling this court's decision analyze evidence and reject reliance on 4 conclusory or speculative findings. They place a value on openness as a primary safeguard and 5 attribute of the American criminal justice system. Comparing the facts and factors analyzed in 6 these cases to the circumstances of this case, neither the People nor the defendant can meet 7 their burden of proof to support sealing--partial or total.

8 In a case involving a community of 850 people, the United States Supreme Court
9 observed: "We have noted earlier that pretrial publicity, even if pervasive and concentrated,
10 cannot be regarded as leading automatically and in every kind of criminal case to an unfair
11 trial." Nebraska Press Assn. v Stuart, 427 U.S. 539, 565 (1976); see also, CBS v. United States 12 District Court for C.D. of Calif. (DeLorean), 729 F.2d 1174 (9th Cir. 1984)(even when 13 exposed to heavy widespread publicity, many if not most potential jurors are untainted by 14 press coverage). DeLorean pointed out that almost all cases in which the Supreme Court has 15 found that press coverage deprived the defendant of a fair trial have been tried in small rural 16 communities. See Rideau v. Louisiana, 373 U.S. 723 (1963); Irvin v. Dowd, 366 U.S. 717
17 (1961)(county of approximately 30,000).

18 Needless to say, the Watergate and O.J. Simpson trials also showed that unbiased
19 jurors can be selected, even in the face of pervasive pretrial publicity. In a community more
20 similar in size to Stanislaus County, the Sonoma County Court denied the defendant's request
21 to close the preliminary hearing in the Polly Klaas trial without impairing the defendant's
22 eventual fair trial rights. Other examples abound. This has been California's experience; it may 23 be a relatively rare one for Stanislaus County but many counties have kept open their courts
24 and records while fully protecting the fair trial rights of defendants in cases with worldwide
25 notoriety. Directing a trial court to set aside its order sealing the grand jury transcript in Press-
26 Enterprise v. Superior Court, 22 Cal. App. 4th 498, 503 (1994), the court of appeal observed
27 all it takes is "12 jurors capable of acting impartially."

28

1 Not only is there no evidence in the record of the size of the jury pool in Stanislaus
2 County, but the defense has already stated that it anticipates moving for a change of venue.

3 The defendant cannot produce evidence to support the finding that there is a 4 "substantial probability" that, even if it exercises its right to move for change of venue, twelve
5 unbiased jurors could not be found in this county or anywhere in the state. Certainly the media
6 and public have not been permitted to review any such evidence to test its adequacy.

7 III. THAT INFORMATION INADMISSIBLE AT TRIAL MAY BE
8 DISCLOSED DOES PERMIT RECORDS TO BE SEALED

9 The fact that information may be disclosed which ultimately may not be offered or 10 admitted in trial is insufficient to support closure of pretrial hearings or documents. In Press
11 Enterprise II, the Court recognized that "publicity concerning the proceedings at a pretrial 12 hearing . . . could influence public opinion against the defendant and inform potential jurors of 13 inculpatory information wholly inadmissible at the actual trial." 478 U.S. at 14. This risk did 14 not automatically justify refusing public access. Id. at 15. "Through voir dire, cumbersome as 15 it is in some circumstances, a court can identify those jurors whose prior knowledge of the 16 case would disable them from rendering an impartial verdict." Id.

17 In this respect, the public right of post-complaint access to search and arrest warrants
18 is indistinguishable from its right of access to the preliminary hearing and to voir dire hearings
19 and transcripts. Here, a statute, Penal Code section 1534, grants that right of access; in the 20 latter instances the United States Supreme Court has ruled that the right of access is rooted in 21 the First Amendment. In all three instances the news media may publicize inculpatory 22 information without the defendant's having had an opportunity to bar its admission at trial or to 23 offer exculpatory evidence in response. Nevertheless, the public's right of access and the need 24 to consider alternatives to closure are well-established.

25 IV. THE DEFENDANT CANNOT DEMONSTRATE THAT ALTERNATIVES
26 TO CLOSURE ARE INADEQUATE TO PROTECT HIS SIXTH
27 AMENDMENT RIGHTS

28 "Mindful that trial courts are understandably reluctant to change venue when the parties and witnesses are in place," the supreme court in Odle v. Superior Court, 32 Cal. 3d

1 932 (1982), pointed out that trial courts have the authority to change venue in an appropriate
2 case even after jury selection has begun. 32 Cal. 3d at 943. At the time of jury selection the 3 jury panel itself provides additional evidence on the impact of pretrial publicity. Id. "What had 4 been a matter of some speculation at the earlier motion--i.e., the actual extent of exposure of 5 those who are potential jurors--becomes, on a later motion, subject to more precise 6 measurement and evaluation." Id. at 943-44.

7 A mere conclusory statement that "[n]o matter how searching the questions . . . certain 8 matters are not detectable, especially those motives relative to bias and prejudice" was rejected
9 in DeLorean as an effective basis for rejecting voir dire as an alternative to closure. DeLorean, 10 729 F.2d at 1182.

11 Further, rejection of voir dire on principle is inconsistent with applicable precedent.
12 The United States Supreme Court in Nebraska Press, 427 U.S. at 563-64 and circuit courts of 13 appeals have repeatedly found that voir dire is a viable alternative to restraints on the press,
14 even in cases attracting massive publicity. DeLorean, 792 F.2d at 1182 (and cases cited).
15 Similarly, in this case, alternatives recognized and approved by the Supreme Court may not be 16 rejected summarily. Their rejection must be based on evidence peculiar to this case. See 17 Nebraska Press Assn., 427 U.S. at 565 (record lacked evidence to support finding rejecting 18 alternative measures).

19 Referring again to the discussion in Tribune Newspapers, the news media assert that 20 this court, before ordering sealing on the basis of pretrial publicity, must consider:

21 (1) the nature and extent of the media coverage, including circulation figures and 22 geographical distribution; . . . ; (4) a change of venue; (5) protection afforded by a 23 searching voir dire of potential jurors; and (6) sequestration of the jury panel.

24 172 Cal. App. 3d at 460. "Alternative measures may present difficulties for trial courts but 25 none are beyond the realm of the manageable." Id.

26 V. THE COST FACTOR IS NOT CONTROLLING OR EVEN 27 CONSTITUTIONALLY RECOGNIZED

28 Tribune Newspapers West, 172 Cal. App. 3d at 458, discusses at length the "dangerous and totally unacceptable" notion that alternatives to a jury trial within an area where

1 prejudicial publicity has circulated may not be pursued before the press is excluded, based on 2 cost. The court points out:

3 Expense to those parties and courts was not a discussed factor, much less a deciding one
4 in San Jose Mercury News [v. Municipal Court], 30 Cal. 3d 498 (1982)], nor in Odle.

5 172 Cal. App. 3d at 458. In virtually all cases, the court found, as between preserving rights of 6 public access and free press and the interest in minimizing the expense of empaneling an 7 impartial jury "it is no contest." Id. at 458.

8 VI. THE PEOPLE'S CITED AUTHORITIES DO NOT SUPPORT SEALING

9 As noted at the outset, the District Attorney relies solely on generalized concerns about 10 pre-trial publicity; he does not rely on any of the factors or types of evidence discussed in the 11 court of appeal's recent decision. The documents the People seek to seal must be disclosed to 12 the public under Penal Code section 1534 and the First Amendment, unless the moving party
13 makes the Press Enterprise type showing embodied in rules of court 243.1 and 243.2.

14 The authorities discussed above compel the court to deny the motion, unless a moving 15 party produces evidence to show alternatives to closure (such as the proposed change of 16 venue) would not protect the defendant's right to a fair trial.

17 The People's cited authorities do not support closure. Estes v. Texas, 381 U.S. 532, 540
18 (1965) (People's memorandum of points and authorities at p. 3), dealt with conduct of the trial 19 itself, not with access to pre-trial proceedings and documents (which were the subject of the 20 more recent Press-Enterprise decisions). In Estes the Court (which issued six separate 21 opinions) held that the defendant was deprived on due process rights by the televising of his 22 trial. In Chandler v. Florida, 449 U.S. 560 (1981), the Court held that television coverage does 23 not necessarily deprive a defendant of due process rights and affirmed the convictions. Since 24 these cases dealt with conduct of the trial itself, they are inapposite.

25 Also, the news media do not assert greater rights of access than the rights of the public 26 generally; nor do they assert that the court has issued a gag order. (People's memorandum of 27 points and authorities at p. 4). These arguments are not on point.
28

1            Allegrezza, Rosato and Craemer are pre-Press Enterprise decisions. (People's 2 memorandum of points and authorities at p. 3). For this reason alone they are of limited or no
3 value. As will be shown, they are also inapposite. In Allegrezza v. Superior Court, 47 Cal.
4 App. 3d 948, 952 (1975), the First Appellate District found no pretrial right of public access to 5 the defendant's confession. There is no suggestion that the sealed documents in this case
6 contain a confession. In Rosato v. Superior Court, 51 Cal. App. 3d 190 (1975), the court
7 considered the asserted right of the news media not to disclose the source of information
8 obtained in violation of a court order. The decision preceded (and prompted) elevation of the 9 shield law to the California Constitution. See Cal. Const. Art. I, Sec. 2. Again, there is no 10 issue here of publication in violation of a court order.

11            In Craemer v. Superior Court, 265 Cal. App. 2d 216 (1968), the court of appeal
12 reviewed a trial court order sealing the transcript of the indicting grand jury. There is no grand 13 jury transcript at issue here. However, contrary to the People's description of the holding, the 14 Craemer court granted the news media's petition for writ of mandate, directing the trial court 15 to require an evidentiary showing by the defendant. (People's memorandum of points and 16 authorities at p. 5). Moreover, Craemer dealt with a claimed right of access to records
17 governed by an entirely different statute (since also changed). To the extent that Craemer
18 requires an evidentiary showing by the moving party, it supports the news media.

19            The test laid out in Craemer has since been changed by the Press-Enterprise decisions
20 and the rules of court. The People suggest that there is a split of authority with respect to 21 whether a "probability of unfairness" or "reasonable likelihood" test applies to this court's 22 determination of the motion to seal. To the contrary, the California Rules of Court and Press-
23 Enterprise require the showing advocated by the news media (and affirmed by the court of 24 appeal in the proceedings before Judge Beauschane):

- 25            (1) There exists an overriding interest that overcomes the right of public access to the 26            record;
- 27            (2) The overriding interest supports sealing the record;
- 28            (3) A substantial probability exists that the overriding interest will be prejudiced if the

1 record is not sealed;

2 (4) The proposed sealing is narrowly tailored; and

3 (5) No less restrictive means exist to achieve the overriding interest.

4 As in Craemer, evidence, not generalities must be produced to support the court's findings on 5 any of these points. The People have presented none.

6 Waller v. Georgia, 467 U.S. 39 (1984) (People's memorandum of points and 7 authorities p. 5), is inapposite because it dealt with the defendant's right to object to closure of 8 pretrial suppression proceedings. The Court reversed where closure of the entire hearing was 9 plainly unjustified and violated the defendant's Sixth Amendment public-trial guarantee.

10 The other authorities cited for the proposition that the court has broad discretion to seal
11 and control its records (People's memorandum of points and authorities at p. 6, n. 18 and p. 7 12 n. 19), do not affect or relate to the standard this court has already adopted, which, contrary to 13 the People's assertions in their petition for writ of mandate, have been approved by the court of 14 appeal.

15 VII. THE NEWS MEDIA DO NOT SEEK ACCESS TO THE EVIDENCE 16 SEIZED

17 Finally, the People persist in relying on Oziel v. Superior Court, 223 Cal. App. 3d
18 1284 (1990) (People's memorandum of points and authorities at p.7-8). Not only did Oziel
19 precede adoption of rules 243.1 and 243.2, but Oziel addressed access to the fruits of the 20 search, not to the warrant and supporting affidavits. The news media do not seek access to the 21 evidence itself. More important, the Fifth Appellate District, by affirming Judge Beauschane's 22 order applying section 1534 to pre-arrest warrants rejected this argument.

23 VIII. CONCLUSION

24 The news media have statutory and First Amendment rights of access to the documents
25 sought to be sealed, absent a showing satisfying the Press Enterprise test adopted by the 26 California Rules of Court. So much has already been decided and affirmed by the court of 27 appeal. Now, as in Craemer, any party seeking to seal presumptively open judicial records 28 must make an evidentiary showing satisfying the test laid out in the rules of court.

1           Openness in court proceedings and documents "enhances both the basic fairness of the 2 criminal trial and the appearance of fairness so essential to public confidence in the system."
3 Richmond Newspapers, Inc. v. Virginia, 448 U.S. 555, 569-571 (1980). "When the public is 4 aware that the law is being enforced and the criminal justice system is functioning, an outlet is 5 provided for these understandable reactions and emotions. Proceedings held in secret would 6 deny this outlet and frustrate the broad public interest . . . ." Press-Enterprise I, 464 U.S. at 7 508-09.

8           For these reasons and based on this authority, the court should deny the motion to seal.
9 The experience of the California courts is that, even in the most high profile cases, the courts
10 are able to protect the constitutional rights of criminal defendants and of the public. There is 11 no evidence to support findings that, first, there is a substantial probability that the defendant's 12 right to a fair trial would be prejudiced by publicity that sealing would prevent and, second,
13 reasonable alternatives to sealing cannot adequately protect the defendant's fair trial rights. Id.
14 at 510.

15           The court should find, under the rules of court and Press-Enterprise decisions:

- 16           (1) There is an absence of evidence to show that the interest in protecting the 17           defendant's fair trial rights supports continued sealing of the records;
18           (2) Given the amount of information already available, there is an absence of evidence 19           to show that sealing would be effective to protect against pretrial publicity;
20           (3) The proposed sealing is overbroad;
21           (4) There is an absence of evidence to show that alternatives, including but not limited 22           to voir dire, sequestration of the jury or change of venue would be ineffective to 23           protect the defendant's fair trial rights;
